Left vs. Right – Powered by Microsoft Live Search -- answers the tough political questions!

REDMOND, Wash. — Jan. 22, 2008

WHY

Because Republicans don't like it when you ask questions. Which is precisely why it is our duty, our calling, our obligation to ask questions and be generally, civilly disobedient. Your questions are welcome here — our tent is big enough for every opinion (even conservative ones, though we don't recommend them). So go ahead, ask the tough questions, get the straight answers. Only at Left vs. Right, where political discourse is about more than watching democracy in action — it's about finding the answers you need to make the best choice when voting (Democrat) in November. Left vs. Right — because progress isn't a four-letter word (it's eight).

WHAT

Left vs. Right — powered by Microsoft Live Search — livens up your Election 2008 Internet searches. Ask questions, get answers, get a laugh, be informed. Left vs. Right helps deliver the facts you want about the political landscape, with fresh, edgy commentary that — after a year of this, already! — you need. Have some fun while you find out about the following:

- The candidates
- The Issues
- Larry Craig ... what's up with that?
- The war
- And much, much more

Me, Patrick O'Neil, the eloquent, informed dulcet voice of the Left. (The conservative too, but feel free to ignore her. Seriously, just ignore her.)

Patrick O'Neil, progressive commentator, political thinker extraordinaire
